Mechanical was involved with designing and building all mechanical, electrical, plumbing, and fire protection (MEP/FP) systems for a new medical office building attached to the Louis A. Weiss Memorial Hospital in Chicago, IL.

The “shell and core” five story building structure is capable of supporting 130,000 square feet of medical offices and specialized tenants. Included are a dialysis center, four station surgical center, and a linear accelerator.

The tenant space development was completed by Mechanical as well. This included MEP/FP design and installation as well as completion of architectural trade construction services.
